Program Background

Comprehensive Extracurricular Activities Program

Background

In 1996, an accord was established between the Cleveland Metropolitan Schools and the City of Cleveland that generated a historic collaborative agreement to implement a Comprehensive Extracurricular Activities Program (CEAP) using the revenues generated by a parking tax.

This program contains five critical components: Marching Band/Instrumental Music, Elementary Non-Traditional Extracurricular, K-8 School Athletics, High School Athletics and the Secondary Extracurricular Activities. Each of these programs provides recreational or cultural enrichment activities for the children of the City of Cleveland. A palette of programs to appeal to every grade level and all sorts of interests was the basis of this agreement. The initiative includes long-gone senior high sports such as wrestling and swimming, as well as long needed athletic programs at the K-8 school level.

The Marching Band and Instrumental Music Programs brought music back to the schools. There is a growing body of evidence that suggest that the study of arts and cultural programs positively effects cognitive development. Research proves that the integration of cultural arts in education can play a significant role in the education of our students. Knowing and practicing the arts disciplines are fundamental to the healthy development of children's minds and spirits.

CEAP also provides for enhancements to the traditional elementary classroom, which would bring artists to school buildings, sponsor museum, arts and theater field trips. Individual schools are able to tailor their program to student's interests, but have to ensure that the offerings involve four-fifths of all children.

CEAP has helped to increase learning both in the arts, and through the arts, with other core curriculum courses for students grades PreK-12. The instrumental programs on the high school and middle school levels involved showcasing students in assemblies, sporting events, parades, concerts, and other special appearances. The implementation of this varied program provided the students not only an opportunity to learn how to play an instrument but to work harmoniously together. It has also brought about better attendance and more self-esteem.

The “All-City” Arts Program, an after-school and weekend, college readiness program that recruits students from various District schools. All-City is designed to build upon and extend the arts curriculum taught by the District’s certified art teachers. The program offers students the opportunity to further develop their artistic talents through comprehensive, hands-on, project-based learning and mentoring, from arts professionals. More than 3,000 students benefit from All-City’s instruction and performance opportunities.
